All of the girls had been shot. The case remained unsolved until October 1999 when police arrested four men, two of whom confessed to the murder. After a year in prison, her conviction was overturned for lack of a motive, but the court did not throw out the expert testimony of the investigators who said the fire was arson. At Sheila's retrial, three and a half years after the incident, the state's experts were countered by Gerald Hurst, a fire expert who claimed there was no reason to label the blaze arson.
